SummerStage is committed to gender and racial equity in its programming, and in 2021, 52% of artists participating in the in-person festival were women or non-binary, and 95% identified as BIPOC.

"Capital One is excited to continue our long-standing support for SummerStage as the title sponsor," said Andy Ramamoorthy, Executive Vice President, Commercial Banking and New York City Market President, Capital One. "Now more than ever we are committed to both supporting and celebrating New York's revival. Vibrant parks, free live music, dance performances, and this festival's mission of diversity and inclusion are critical to revitalizing our neighborhoods and building a sense of community. We are honored to play a role in New York City's revival by sponsoring SummerStage performances again this year and keeping them free and open for all New Yorkers to enjoy.”
